WILL HOMEOWNER'S TUNNEL PLAN BRING INVASION OF BEACH MOLES?

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE HISTORIC James House, designed by famed architect Charles Sumner Greene in the Carmel Highlands in 1917, is about to make history again. The owners received approval from the Monterey County Planning Commission June 27 to dig a tunnel through solid rock leading from the house directly to the beach.

The underground passage and stairway, the first of its kind on the Peninsula, will begin in the James House boiler room, go through the bedrock of the cliff and open right onto the rocky cove.

While the property has a wooden stairway leading down to the beach now, those stairs have been damaged repeatedly over the years by storms and high water.

Monterey County's planning consultant, Tad Stearn, told the commission he worked with staff on an in-depth review of the project's environmental impacts and decided they would be insignificant.

In addition, Stearn said staff wrote a 10-page policy analysis to determine if the project was consistent with the local coastal program — an approach recommended by the California Coastal Commission.

"We couldn't [illegible]," Stearn said.

The project will not require tree removal, grading for buildings, slope disturbance, visible scarring or extensive landform alteration, staff noted.

Despite one commissioner's worry that a proposed tunnel to the sea under the James House would encourage others to 'start boring tunnels to the beach,' the project was unanimously approved by the county planning commission.

New cities pay millions in 'alimony'

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SELF-GOVERNMENT is expensive. But it's worth it.

That's the consensus of officials from four of California's newest cities, all of which have been forced to pay millions in "alimony" to the county governments they left behind — an issue residents of Carmel Valley may soon face.

The payments, called 'revenue neutrality,' are required by state law to prevent wealthy areas from declaring independence and taking their tax dollars with them.

A financial feasibility study released just last week revealed that Carmel Valley pays Monterey County about $1 million more a year than it gets back in services, according to Carmel Valley Property Owners Association member Glenn Robinson. A 25-member steering committee of Valley residents and business people is reviewing the study and will eventually recommend whether the [illegible] Carmel Valley Master Plan [illegible] City of Carmel Valley — a move that could bring a hefty price tag.

City of Elk Grove

The quickly growing Sacramento suburb of Elk Grove — which incorporated July 1, 2000 — may end up paying Sacramento County close to $50 million during the next 25 years. But that's a price worth paying, according to Mayor James Cooper, who is also a captain with the Sacramento County Sheriff's Department.

Carmelites recall in detail the terror of Pearl Harbor

By MARY BROWNFIELD

TO MOVIEGOERS, Pearl Harbor is a distant story of romance, friendship and death.

To Carmel resident Jackie Cagwin, the shocking events of Dec. 7, 1941, are remembered so clearly, they could have happened just the other day.

She had only been married a few weeks when she and her new husband, Leland — at the time, an Army Lieutenant stationed at Ft. Ord — were shipped off to Pearl Harbor.

Six months later, the base where they lived was bombed by the Japanese on what came to be known as the "Day of Infamy."

Army Lt. Leland Cagwin and Jacqueline Smith had known each other only two weeks when they were married May 11, 1941, at St. John's Chapel in Monterey. Less than a month later, they were sent for a tour of duty at Pearl Harbor.

Carmelites Lee and Jackie Cagwin today. The couple celebrated their 60th anniversary last month.

"On the seventh of December, Lee got up early and went to clean his pistol, and he heard a sound like a swarm of bees," she said. Knowing the noise was far from typical, he ran out onto the bedroom porch to investigate.

"A bomb fell in our back yard and it knocked me out of bed. I picked myself up and went outside to the porch and as I did, the Japanese plane sheered the top off the tree in front of our yard," she said. "I could see the pilot's face, and I saw the red ball on the side of the plane, but it meant nothing to me — I'd never seen one before.

"I turned to my husband and said, 'I'm not going to tell my mother about this, because she will be very worried about me.'"

IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT NOT A HIT WITH MANY CARMEL BUSINESSES

By SISSI MALEKI

THE PROPOSAL for a Carmel Business Improvement District was dealt a setback when a survey of the town's businesses found that many do not support the idea of a special assessment to help bring more tourists to town.

The BID, first proposed last year, would be funded by an annual assessment — ranging from .2 percent up to one percent of gross revenues — based on the type of business (see box on page 19A).

The survey, conducted in April by a committee appointed by Mayor Sue McCloud, had a very low response rate — just 20 percent — and most of the respondents were against the BID.

Nielsen Bros. Market owner Merv Sutton speculated that "supporters got lazy," while Pine Inn General Manager John Wilson said the main objection expressed, to his frustration, was: "Business is bad so I can't afford this now."

"When the economy slows down — that's exactly when you need to do promotion," he argued.

Flo Snyder, a retired California State director of tourism, agreed. "You can lose your market share no matter how wonderful your place is because someone else can market their place to look just as wonderful, if not better," she said.

The key to the BID, said Carmel Business Association president Larry Hoover, is that "it will be

McCloud: Paid parking experiment worth a try

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL MAYOR Sue McCloud believes the city should go forward with a demonstration of paid parking downtown and decide once and for all whether the profit-making venture — dependent on a series of "pay stations" throughout town — is right for Carmel.

A city committee has already studied the idea of a "pay and display" parking system — which would require the installation of one or two kiosks per block — and city staff is prepared to demonstrate on a block or two downtown if the manufacturer is still agreeable.

At the June 19 council meeting, McCloud said the city could have moved ahead with a demonstration last September, but "rightly or wrongly my feeling was that we could not talk about paid parking and mail delivery in the same millennium."

Now that the mail issue appears to be resolved, McCloud and others said it's time to give paid parking its day in court.

"All the work has been done on paid parking," McCloud said. "A lot of effort has been expended. Let's let the public see what's been done and make a call, thumbs up or thumbs down."

McCloud said the city should be looking ahead to its future financial condition, especially if the trend of flat revenues continues.

"If our revenues remain flat and our expenses for salaries and benefits and everything else continue to escalate, seven years out those railroad tracks will intersect," McCloud said.

The net revenue of such a paid parking program could bring the city anywhere from $800,000 to $1.2 million annually, according to Carmel Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio.

Carmel City Councilwoman Barbara Livingston also said paid parking is worth a try.

"Without a trial we cannot judge the aesthetics of the project," Livingston said. "It may be that the townspeople will say, 'No thank you, we don't want any form of metered parking,' or they may say, 'This isn't so bad. We should go with it.'"

Livingston added that the city can start making money immediately by requiring paid parking for the tour buses at Carmel Plaza.

Councilman Gerard Rose said he would look at the parking committee's report but has reservations about paid parking in Carmel.

"From my own perspective, paid parking is a bad idea," Rose said. "We'd be much better off finding money to build an appropriate parking structure."

The council, which worked very hard during the last year to prevent mailboxes in Carmel, will have to weigh whether parking kiosks are worth the money they would bring.

"I find parking meters in general offensive," Rose said. "The idea of parking kiosks would also be offensive. The very notion of parking meters runs contrary to the long established view that we want to minimize signs and other obstructions. It will take a very persuasive argument to change my opinion."

McCloud pointed out that the proposed pay stations — "tall and thin, Twiggy-shaped" — would be much less obtrusive than typical "industrial-strength" meters.

Installing the kiosks could get rid of much of the existing 90-minute parking signs around town, the mayor noted.

The test blocks for a paid parking pilot program would likely include one block of Ocean Avenue and one block of San Carlos.

Council to debate fate of Flanders Mansion again

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AN INDEPENDENT appraisal of Flanders Mansion has been submitted to the City of Carmel but won't be revealed to council members until they make a decision on whether to sell the historic home or lease it.

Certified MAI appraiser Mark Askew of Monterey was hired by Carmel City Administrator Rich Guillen several months ago to complete a fee appraisal. However, the city doesn't want to disclose his findings because that could affect negotiations with potential buyers, Guillen said. Requirements of the Brown Act open-meeting law prevent council members from discussing an appraisal in closed session.

Last February, real estate broker Greg Kraft evaluated the property for the city and reported the mansion could fetch between $4.5 million and $5 million. Kraft's report was based on surveys of recent selling prices of other large homes in Carmel, Pebble Beach, South Coast and Carmel Valley that closed escrow between $3.4 and $5.6 million.

However, since February the soaring real estate market has dropped to less lofty heights.

The fate of Flanders has been debated by Carmel officials off and on since the city purchased the Mansion nearly 30 years ago.

In December 1999, the city council turned down a proposal from a private group wishing to open the 5,559-square-foot mansion to public events, opting instead to sell or lease it. A number of potential buyers, including former mayor Clint Eastwood and land-use attorney John Paul Hanna, have said they would like to buy the home and restore it.

Since then, the city has completed a lot-line adjustment separating Flanders from the rest of the Mission Trail Nature Preserve and creating a new 1.427-acre parcel for the mansion.

"We need to bring back the decision to council so we can come to closure on Flanders one way or another because the house continues to deteriorate," said Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud.

The Tudor-revival home's most pressing problems include roof damage, drainage problems in the basement, termites, dry rot and electrical and plumbing repairs.

Firemen's barbecue kicks off a week of patriotic events

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

IT HAPPENS once a year sometimes just before the Fourth of July, sometimes just after: the Carmel-by-the-Sea Fire Department's BBQ.

This year it takes place before the nation's birthday party, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, June 30. The place is always the same, Devendorf Park, Ocean at Junipero, Carmel.

Giant trailers will haul in Pat Duval's rib smoker and Fire Captain Bruce Meyer's barbecue pit — named "Unit 7193" — to cook up tri-tip steak and chicken for sandwiches, as well as giant hot dogs and pork spareribs.

The two main chefs will be Captains Mitch Kastros and Meyer, with 15 to 20 other firefighters making the sandwiches. Kastros said the sandwiches are large: "They weigh about a ton, and it's like half a loaf of bread per sandwich." He said the sandwiches are so large, most people have half left over for dinner.

Cost of the best-deal-in-town barbecue is $7 for sandwiches, $3 for hot dogs, $8 for a full rack of ribs and $5 for half. Ribs come with garlic bread and the sandwiches with a bag of potato chips. Sodas and bottled water are $1.

Families are invited to bring along lawn blankets to lunch alfresco in the park.

Free concert

Patriotic celebrations on the Peninsula will continue July 1 when the Naval Postgraduate School will host a free outdoor pops concert and offer tours of the historic Hotel Del Monte.

The Monterey Bay Symphony Orchestra will perform popular selections from Gilbert and Sullivan, Rodgers and Hammerstein, Handel and Sousa on the Sun Terrace of the former Hotel Del Monte, now Herrmann Hall. The symphony will begin rehearsal at 11 a.m. and the formal performance will begin at 2 p.m.

Spectators are invited to bring blankets or lawn chairs to relax on the former hotel's lawn.

During its open house, NPS will also sponsor two lectures on the history of the famous hotel, at 11 a.m. and noon, which will be followed by guided tours.

On the actual Fourth of July, the City of Monterey will host a full day's worth of festivities, beginning with a flag raising procession down Alvarado Street at 10 a.m. The city's parade immediately follows the flag raisings at 10:20 a.m. and will wind down Alvarado Street, up Del Monte Avenue and finish on Calle Principal.

Afterwards, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monterey will hold its free "Big Little Backyard Barbecue on the Colton Hall lawn. Non profit groups will be selling food and drinks at booths at the family event.

Regardless of whether the fog makes an appearance, Monterey's fireworks show will begin at 9:15 p.m. from a barge adjacent to Wharf No. 2. The 20-minute pyrotechnic extravaganza will be synchronized with music on KWAV 96.9 FM.

Locals who want to put on their own fireworks show will have to exit Carmel, Monterey, and all unincorporated ares of the county including Carmel Valley, Big Sur and Pebble Beach. In addition, Carmel's city ordinances prohibit any fires or alcohol on the beach after 10 p.m. Special parking restrictions will be in effect on Scenic Drive, San Antonio Avenue, Eighth Avenue, 13th Avenue and Santa Lucia.

U.S. Department of Transportation Federal Highway Administration

Announcement of Public Information Meeting/Open House Prunedale 101 Freeway Project

WHEN AND WHERE

Date: July 11, 2001
Time: 4:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m.
Place: North Monterey County High School Library Building
13840 Castroville Blvd.
Castroville, CA 95012

WHAT IS BEING PLANNED?

Caltrans (California Department of Transportation), in cooperation with the Federal Highway Administration and the Transportation Agency for Monterey County (TAMC), is proposing to improve safety and traffic movement along the Route 101 corridor through the community of Prunedale in Monterey County. Alternatives include upgrading the existing alignment, constructing a bypass, and the No Build Alternative. Project limits are from 0.4 miles north of Boronda Road to 0.9 miles south of San Juan Road.

Important issues being evaluated include: wetlands, floodplains, sensitive plant and animal species, community resources, hazardous waste sites, and historic properties and other cultural resources.

WHERE DO YOU COME IN?

We are encouraging community members and interested parties to attend the Open House and review the updates to Alternative 2 (Improve Existing Alignment) and Alternative 4 East Bypass. This Open House will provide information clarifying the transportation issues to be resolved and the area resources valued by the community and regulatory agencies. The Open House forum will give you an opportunity to examine the proposed plans, express your opinion, and help Caltrans refine each alternative to best meet the community needs.

Representatives from project management, engineering, landscape architecture, right of way, traffic, and environmental planning will be available to answer your questions and take your comments.

Feds may ask for demolition of San Clemente Dam

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IN AN ideal world, the San Clemente Dam would cease to exist, according to National Marine Fisheries Service specialist Patrick Rutten, but a report on options for the silted-up and seismically unsafe dam may suggest a completely different option for its future.

Although he did not want to comment on specifics until a study is released later this summer, Rutten said NMFS may recommend "phased notching" of the 100-year-old dam to allow the gradual release of sediment down the river, or collapsing the dam in place and slowly releasing the sediment.

Rutten expects the sediment team — which is working on a set of sediment-flow models for the dam — to propose a solution by the end of August.

"There is a major sediment issue there that needs to be addressed." he said. "The sediment either has to come down through the system in a controlled fashion, which is what we would suggest," or it could be dredged and moved to another location.

Completely removing the dam would be best for the fish and the river habitat, Rutten said, but he insisted NMFS is "100 percent on board" in the search for a reliable water source and has suggested off-river water storage — at Fort Ord — for example.

In a May 24 letter to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, NMFS formally opposed the 24,000-acre-foot Carmel River Dam and Reservoir Project, citing possible threats to the river's steelhead population.

Clean Los Padres dam instead

In order to provide more water storage in the near term, Rutten said he favors immediate silt removal from the existing Los Padres Dam farther up the river.

"That's being discussed, and I would sure like it to get some momentum. It's an immediate solution to a bad problem," Rutten said. "It creates 1,500 acre-feet of storage in a relatively quick fashion without new construction and with a minimum impact to fisheries. And in the grand scheme of things of having a water storage process without a huge economic outlay, it's a very doable project."

SALINAS SUBURBS CROWD INTO POTTER'S PENINSULA

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH THE rest of the county struggling over rural representation versus minority rights, one thing is clear about Monterey County's new political boundaries: 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter is going to get a lot more territory.

Laguna Seca, Pasadera, Corral de Tierra, San Benancio Canyon, Toro Park, Laureles Grade and Las Palmas Ranch will all be added to Potter's district if the county's redistricting plan is approved later this year.

"It's a substantial increase in acreage, but I don't think the issues are a whole lot different," Potter said. "For the Highway 68 corridor, the two most pressing issues are water and traffic — that sounds a lot like Carmel Valley Road to me."

Potter said he plans to apply the standards and philosophies he has used when considering development proposals in Pebble Beach and Carmel Valley to projects in the new areas, though he acknowledged that Highway 68 has its own unique problems.

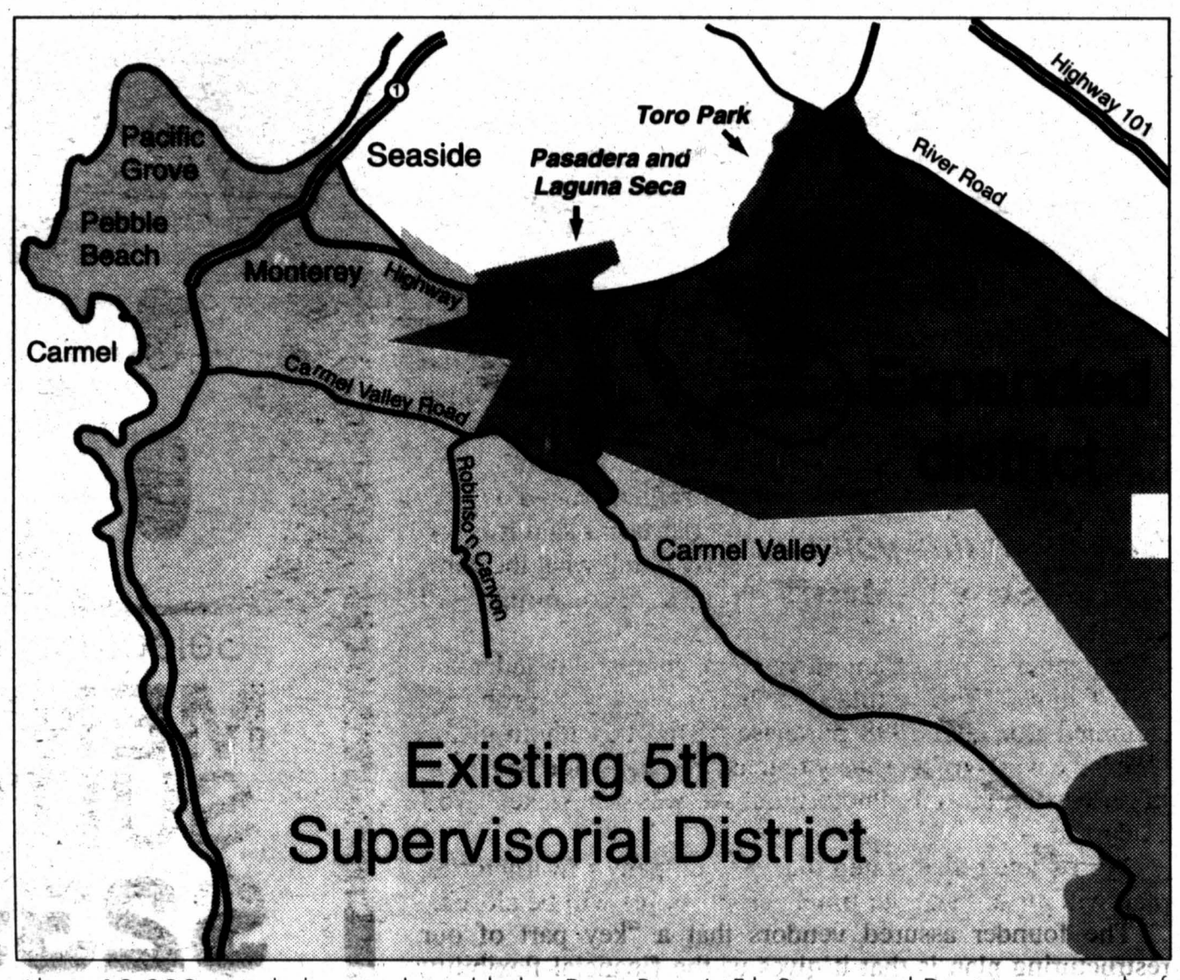
"I think the build-out issues are greater because Carmel Valley Road is not the through road that 68 is," Potter said.

Already acquainted with some of the more vocal residents of what is currently 2nd District Supervisor Judy Pennycook's territory because they've made frequent appearances at supervisors' public hearings, Potter said he wants to get to know the other people in the neighborhoods.

"I plan to have some sort of welcome-to-the-5th-District event after this is resolved," he said.

On Tuesday supervisors held their first public hearing on two competing proposals to realign the county's five supervisorial districts because of population changes revealed in the 2000 census. With the county's population now just over 400,000, each district is supposed to contain 80,000 people. Most of the population growth has been in Salinas, leaving residents of rural parts of the county concerned they may lose influence on the board. At the same time, federal law requires that minorities be guaranteed adequate representation.

A second hearing on the proposed supervisorial districts will be held July 10 at 10 a.m. If approved, the updated map then would be sent to the U.S. Department of Justice for clearance to ensure the new districts do not weaken the minority vote.



About 10,000 people have to be added to Dave Potter's 5th Supervorial District as a result of population changes found by the 2000 census. Communities on Laureles Grade, Highway 68 and River Road will be moved into the district under both redistricting plans being considered.

Exec: Wolf Camera's bankruptcy shouldn't affect Carmel store

By TAMARA GRIPPI

JUST A week after Wolf Camera filed for Chapter 11 in an effort to rebuild the bankrupt company, executives called the Carmel and San Francisco Bay Area stores some of the best performing in the chain.

"Carmel in particular and the San Francisco Bay Area are two of the largest and best markets in the country," said Steve LaMastra, Wolf's executive vice president for corporate strategy and planning. "We don't anticipate closing that store [Carmel] at this point."

Michael Troutman, store manager of the Carmel Wolf Camera store, is taking a wait-and-see approach. "For us here, it's business as usual — and for all the stores on the West Coast that I'm aware of," he said.

LaMastra said the Chapter 11 filing, which was completed June 21, should improve the situation in the stores "because we'll get a flood of new inventory."

'Carmel in particular and the San Francisco Bay Area are two of the largest and best markets in the country. We don't anticipate closing Carmel at this point.'
— Steve LaMastra

"We entered into Chapter 11 in an orderly fashion," LaMastra said. "We're supported by our bank group [a 10-bank syndicate lead by First Union]. Eastman Kodak supports us and the rest of the vendor community has rallied around us."

LaMastra said it is too early to tell what the company's restructuring will entail.

In a letter to Wolf Camera vendors, company founder and CEO Chuck Wolf explained his company's problems stemmed from the 1998 purchase of the Fox Photo chain. "We have worked vigorously to make the transition work but, in retrospect, the Fox Photo purchase was a mistake," Wolf explained.

Wolf's letter also stated that the company's restructuring plan will mean that over time, certain stores will be closed.

The founder assured vendors that a "key part of our restructuring plan is that it gives us the financial flexibility to cover the payments for present and future merchandise once we have completed our Chapter 11 filing, which we accomplished successfully today."

Carmel promises welcome for Scottish caber parade

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CABER parade down Ocean Avenue — a cherished city tradition which marched right past Carmel last year because of a disagreement over insurance — will return this year, Carmel officials promise.

"They'll be back," said Carmel City Administrator Rich Guillen. "We're going to have them in town one way or another."

Christie Miller of the city's community activities division said it looks like the misunderstanding over the insurance has been cleared up.

The Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula's use permit has been approved by the city, pending receipt of insurance.

"They know exactly what they're required to give us and we're going to work with them to make it happen," Miller said.

Roddy Mackay of the Scottish Games explained that last year's misunderstanding stemmed from a "misinterpretation of what our insurance would do."

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud joked that "It's ironic to have the parade disappear when a Scottish mayor is elected. From what I understand, the problems have been ironed out and we would welcome them back. That's the kind of small-town thing I think is really fun."

Mackay agreed that he didn't want to disappoint McCloud, a fellow member of the clan.

"She's threatened to run the Mackays, the Campbells and the rest of us out of town if we don't have it," Mackay said.

The caber parade, which always marks the beginning of the annual Scottish Games held each August, has been a familiar site in Carmel since the 1970s.

This year the Scottish Games will be held at Toro Park. (The games have typically been held at the Monterey Fairgrounds.) The parade is tentatively scheduled to begin Aug. 3 at 5 p.m.

The Scottish Society is hoping the city will make a small contribution to offset the parade's expenses.

"It seems like a very small amount to bring something unique and appropriate to Carmel," McCloud said.

Carmel Mission will miss Monsignor Murphy — the on-call pastor

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IN THE 12 years Monsignor Declan Murphy has served as pastor of the Carmel Mission Basilica, he has made it a point to leave his doors of the rectory open to anyone.

"When people come to see me, I never say I'm busy," said Murphy, who retires this week from his role as pastor of the Mission. "I always put off my other work (to talk with people)."

Parishioner Dolores Hagey, who organized a thank-you celebration for the Monsignor June 10, said many have been touched by Murphy's compassion.

"I'll never forget the time my sister was in the hospital and he came to the hospital at 3 a.m. to give the blessing of the sick," Hagey said.

Over the years, many lost souls have come to the doors of the rectory. The parish often hands out food and offers counseling to those who need help.

'I saw the important part religion played in people's lives.'

— Monsignor Declan Murphy

"It's good to give spiritual aid — that's important," Murphy said. "And it's also good to give material aid."

Helping distressed people find peace can be one of the most rewarding — and challenging — parts of a priest's work.

"We try to bring back people to the Church who have been wandering away," Murphy explained. "Trying to find the right words sometimes is challenging. We try to bring them back and be gentle with them."

Returning to his homeland

Murphy will return to his native Ireland, where he hopes to spend time gardening, reading and doing a little traveling. While he retires from his official church duties, Murphy explains that he will never retire from his spiritual calling.

He will start every day by saying Mass privately. And he'll also be helping out in the local parish. "I'm looking forward to doing things on my own time," Murphy, 75, explained

Monsignor Declan Murphy will miss the sense of history at Carmel Mission, but he's already planning his return visit.

The Monsignor, who was born in County Cork, Ireland and studied for the priesthood at All Hallows Seminary in Dublin, said that as a young man he was inspired to look after people's souls.

"I saw the important part religion played in people's lives," he said.

After ordination for the Monterey-Fresno Diocese in 1949, Murphy has been assigned to many California parishes, including St. Angela's in Pacific Grove, where he spent six years as associate pastor and St. Patrick's in Watsonville, where he served as pastor for 18 years.

The historic Carmel Mission Basilica, burial place of Father Junipero Serra, holds a special place in Murphy's heart. He admits he's always felt a little awed to be walking in the footsteps of Serra, who is likely to be canonized.

"There are millions of people who are saints, but very few who will be named saints," Murphy explained. "There's a sense of history here that you don't find in other churches."

Murphy's half century of priestly service and achievements were recognized by Pope John Paul II last December, when the Vatican bestowed the title of Protonotary Apostolic — one of the church's highest honors, dating from the 16th Century — upon the Carmel pastor.

The well-loved Monsignor, who has always wished to hold a celebration in the courtyard at the Carmel Mission, finally got his wish June 10 when 450 people showed up to thank Murphy for his many years of service.

Paris Bakery even created a cake in the shape of a shamrock for the occasion.

While Murphy knows he will miss his church family at the Carmel Mission, he is happy to know that he will return in six months to witness the completion of the new 17,500-square-foot gymnasium for the Mission School, a project he has been working on for several years.

"It's for the children of the school who have nowhere to assemble," Murphy said. "And it will be a nice place where people of the parish can meet together."

For all his work, both spiritual and material, Murphy is satisfied to be leaving the Carmel Mission, a "vital parish."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Sociologists report in Social Science and Medicine that people with bad financial credit have a tendency toward poor physical health. The survey, conducted at Ohio State University, consisted of questions pertaining to the number of credit cards used, the amount of money owed on the cards, the relationship between the amount of debt and income, and the amount of worry and stress regarding debt. Researchers found significantly more health problems reported among people with a worse debt/income ratio.

Her mother was a collector of simple treasures ranging from cut glass to silver service pieces and china to costume jewelry. But as her mother's condition worsened, Ms. Richards noticed her mother's interest in the collectibles dwindled as she focused on her visitors – it was the people that mattered and not the possessions.

City Council Approves Marketing Funds

At a special Council meeting last week, the Carmel-by-the-Sea City Council adopted the 2001-2002 city budget. The budget includes $100,000 earmarked for visitor destination marketing. The marketing funds, originally not included in the budget, were reinstated after an outpouring of support from local business people at two separate council meetings. The CBA, working with the city council and city manager, will oversee the destination marketing program. The funds will be distributed by the city on a quarterly basis. The city and the CBA plan to sit down together very soon and complete an overall evaluation of the marketing program. CBA President, Larry Hoover, expressed his gratitude after the special session: "We appreciate the continued support of the city council and welcome the opportunity to work closely with them during the upcoming fiscal year."

INCORPORATION

"Being a city now, the city council members are all residents and are responsible to the citizens. People's voices are definitely heard, and they have already enjoyed some of the fruits," Cooper said. "We just passed our budget, with more money to libraries, our teen center, and the senior center and programs. We had the ability to impact the community immediately.'

Elk Grove, with a population of 70,000, is paying big bucks for the benefits of self-government.

According to city manager David Jinkens, the Sacramento County Board of Supervisors okayed the incorporation of Elk Grove after residents agreed to make cash payments back to the county for 25 years. For the first five years it must hand over 90 percent of its property taxes to the county.

"This year, it will be about $2.3 million," he said. "But as the city grows over time, that number will grow, and we could be looking at $47-50 million over 25 years."

Cooper said statistics suggest Elk Grove's population will hit 160,000 in the next 19 years.

"Revenue neutrality was a big issue because we have to pay it back for 25 years, but you realize that and bite the bullet," he said.

The major issues behind the incorporation of Elk Grove were the need for more law enforcement and control over development, according to Cooper.

"A lot of planning and building was going on down here that wasn't the best for the city," he said. "I think that overall, people feel that local government is more responsive to their needs — phone calls are returned, things are working a lot better and the accountability is there."

City of Oakley

The price was much lower for the rural City of Oakley, incorporated July 1, 1999, with a population of 26,500. Residents of that city were required to pay just under $1 million to Contra Costa County spread over five years.

Oakley — a farming community in eastern Contra Costa County — has struggled to make the payments because the county underestimated Oakley's costs, according to Steven Carmichael, administrative services director for the city.

"The cost of services was underestimated by half and all of the salaries were under by more than 50 percent," he said. The pinch has forced Oakley to be creative in its efforts to provide services to its residents, according to Carmichael.

But incorporation was definitely worth it, said Vice Mayor Tinker Vanek.

"We wanted to become a city to have local control, and we've accomplished that and now provide better services. There's nothing better than having local control — you can build the city you want," she said. "One day, we are going to be unique and very quaint. We have a lot of plans and it's a great joy, like building your own home."

The only way to develop a city is to control its finances and use the money on projects deemed worthy by its residents, she said.

"Development issues are very important because you set your own standards, and to set standards is to preserve the city," she said. "We live here and we know the needs."

Laguna Woods, a.k.a. Leisure World

The Orange County community of Laguna Woods, incorporated March 24, 1999, is home to a seniors-only development called Leisure World and contains no non-senior housing within its city limits.

Its residents struggled with the same issues of finance and freedom in their decision to incorporate, according to city manager Leslie Keane.

The central concern of Laguna Woods' residents was Orange County's plan to turn a nearby former military base into a commercial airport.

"This community does not want that, so that was a major issue for us," Keane said. "Our money was being put into pushing the airport, and we wanted to spend our money opposing the airport."

The price for that control came in at about $400,000 a year for the next seven years, according to Keane.

Unequal bargaining

Most soon-to-be cities operate at a disadvantage when negotiating their payments to the county, according to various city officials.

"How much the city has to pay back to the county is really up to the county," Keane said.

"'Revenue sharing' sounds more voluntary than it is," said Elk Grove's Jenkins.

Carmichael said the City of Oakley is still haggling with Contra Costa County over the amount or property taxes it should be retaining.

The Orange County city of Rancho Santa Margarita, which incorporated January 1, 2000 with a population of 47,214, lies at the foot of the Santa Ana Mountains and identifies itself as "a small city with the soul of a small village."

That small city is now faced with paying $12 million to Orange County.

According to city manager Bill Tally, Rancho Santa Margarita must pay the county $7.2 million in the first seven years, and then provide a portion of its sales taxes until the remaining $4.8 million is paid off. The city wrote its first $1.1 million check to the county just this week.

"The city council said, 'Okay, let's live with it and get on with it,'" Tally said. "But would they have done it if they didn't have to? No. The county is saying this is the price of freedom."

Computer model may help river flood no more

By MARY BROWNFIELD

IN ORDER to avoid a replay of the 1995 floods that washed out the Carmel River Bridge and put Mission Fields under water, the county hired consultant Phillip Williams and Associates to advise how best to keep the water in its channel.

The board of supervisors agreed June 26 to pay for the $130,000 study in which PWA will develop computer models of flooding and storm water runoff in the lower Carmel River.

"We need to see what work remains to be done to give the north side — Mission Fields and the Crossroads area — 100-year flood protection, if we can," said Joe Madruga, chief engineer of the water resources agency's operations and maintenance division. "We have done a lot, but it's not up to FEMA [Federal Emergency Management Agency] standards."

Any flood-control measures undertaken in that area could be complicated by the fact that many other groups, including the California Coastal Conservancy and the Big Sur Land Trust, are interested in rehabilitating the habitat in that area of the river.

"The whole picture is more complex now that south-side habitat improvements are being proposed," he said. "We want to tie those together and see how they affect things."

But Madruga is optimistic that the various agencies could work together to meet all needs.

"Depending on the alternatives proposed and whether projects on the south side might affect flooding here on the north side, there could be a cooperative effort — we certainly don't want to rule that out," he said.

However, any eventual improvements on the north side of the river will likely not affect the lagoon's propensity for flooding one way or the other, according to Madruga.

The model

The consultant will gather rainfall and flooding data — from the U.S. Geological Survey, the National Weather Service, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and local agencies including the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District — and apply them to the characteristics of the watershed to generate flood-routing models, according to Monterey County Public Works Director Lew Bauman.

"It would focus on various flood scenarios, like at five, 10, 25 and 100-year flood conditions, and from that model would recommend the best systems to ensure the best form of flood control," he said.

Conceptual solutions, either mechanized or static, will be identified in the study, Bauman said.

"When you look at flood control systems like pump stations and lift stations, they depend on power, work best with back-up systems and are fairly complicated," he said. "The best systems are passive — like conduits, drainage and flood walls — because they don't require any exterior power systems and have minimal maintenance."

PLEASE READ THE FOLLOWING LEGAL NOTICE CAREFULLY. IT CONTAINS INFORMATION THAT MAY AFFECT YOUR RIGHTS.

NOTICE OF CIGARETTE MARKETING CLASS ACTION LAWSUIT

THIS NOTICE IS DIRECTED TO THE FOLLOWING PERSONS:

ALL PERSONS WHO AS CALIFORNIA RESIDENT MINORS (UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE) SMOKED ONE OR MORE CIGARETTES IN CALIFORNIA BETWEEN APRIL 2, 1994 AND DECEMBER 31, 1999, AND THE PARENTS AND/OR GUARDIANS OF SUCH PERSONS UNDER THE AGE OF 18.

IMPORTANT

PLEASE READ THIS NOTICE CAREFULLY. IT RELATES TO THE PENDENCY OF A CLASS ACTION LAWSUIT, AND IF YOU ARE A CLASS MEMBER, CONTAINS IMPORTANT INFORMATION AS TO YOUR RIGHTS.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE LAWSUIT

There is a lawsuit pending in the Superior Court of the State of California for the County of San Diego entitled Daniels v. Philip Morris, Case No. 719446 (ICCP No. 4042) (the "Lawsuit") filed by Plaintiffs Devin Daniels, Bryce Clements, Daimon Fullerton, Nicole Morrow and Maren Sandler ("Plaintiffs") against Philip Morris Incorporated, Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, and Lorillard Tobacco Company ("Defendants").

The Plaintiffs' Complaint in the Lawsuit alleges that, during the relevant period, the Defendants engaged in unlawful and deceptive marketing and advertising practices in order to seduce and induce minors in California to smoke cigarettes (the "Practices"). The Plaintiffs allege that the Defendants' Practices constitute unlawful, unfair and fraudulent business practices in violation of the Unfair Competition Law, Business and Professions Code § 17200. Based on these allegations, the Plaintiffs seek to recover on behalf of themselves and the Class certified by the Court: (i) disgorgement and/or restitution of all monies obtained by the Defendants from sales of cigarettes to minors during the class period, and (ii) an order enjoining these Practices. The Lawsuit also requests an award of attorneys' fees and costs if the Lawsuit is successful. It is anticipated that any such request by Class Counsel will be sought to be paid from either a deduction from any recovery obtained by the Class or to be paid directly by Defendants.

The Defendants in the lawsuit deny that their marketing and advertising practices are unlawful or deceptive and deny that they have violated Business and Professions Code § 17200. Defendants contend that the settlement that they entered into with the State of California bars this action in its entirety. Defendants have asserted various additional defenses to the lawsuit.

This notice is not intended to be, and should not be construed as, an expression of any opinion by the Court with respect to the truth of the allegations in the Lawsuit or the merits of the claims or defenses asserted. The sole purpose of this Notice is to inform you of the pendency of this Lawsuit so that you may make an informed decision as to whether you wish to remain in or opt out of this class action.

DEFINITION OF THE CLASS

In an Order dated December 13, 2000, the Court certified this Lawsuit as a class action. The Class is defined as including the following persons:

ALL PERSONS WHO AS CALIFORNIA RESIDENT MINORS (UNDER 18 YEARS OF AGE) SMOKED ONE OR MORE CIGARETTES IN CALIFORNIA BETWEEN APRIL 2, 1994 AND DECEMBER 31, 1999.

CLASS MEMBERS' RIGHTS

If you are a person who smoked one or more cigarettes under the circumstances set forth above in the "Definition of the Class," meaning that you were a minor at the time and you lived in California, you have the options set forth below. If you are currently under the age of 18, you must discuss this Notice and the options set forth below with a parent or legal guardian and he or she must make this decision for you.

1. You may do nothing and remain a member of the Class. To remain a member of the Class you do not need to do anything. There is no need for you to call, write, or send anything at this time in order for you to remain a member of the Class. If you remain a member of the Class, you will be bound by any judgment in the Lawsuit, whether favorable or unfavorable. This means that, if a judgment favorable to the Plaintiffs is obtained, you will be entitled to share in the restitution or other recovery ordered by the Court, if any. For example, if the Court orders the Defendants to provide restitution or disgorgement of money acquired through the sale of cigarettes to minors, you may be entitled to make a claim for restitution for money you spent on cigarettes. If you remain in the Class, however, you also will be barred from asserting the same claims against the Defendants, (i.e., any unfair competition claims alleging that Defendants have marketed cigarettes to minors and seeking restitution of money acquired through such practices) in any future lawsuit or any lawsuit that you bring as an individual. If a judgment is rendered in favor of the Defendants, Class members will be denied any recovery from this Lawsuit. You will automatically be considered a member of the Class, unless you request exclusion in accordance with the procedure set forth below.

2. You may exclude yourself from the Class. You have a right to be excluded from the Class if you wish, but you must submit a request to be excluded in writing. If you wish to be excluded from the Class, you and/or your parent or legal guardian must request exclusion in accordance with the procedure set forth below.

HOW TO BE EXCLUDED FROM THE LAWSUIT

If you want to be excluded from the Class, you must send a written request for exclusion to Gilardi & Co., at PO Box 8040, San Rafael, CA 94912-8040. The request must be mailed (post-marked) on or November 19, 2001 (60 days from the dissemination date ordered by the Court). The request should state: "I DO NOT WANT TO BE PART OF THE PLAINTIFF CLASS IN DANIELS v. PHILIP MORRIS, NO. 719446." The request should also state your name and your date of birth.

If you are currently over the age of 18, the request should be signed by you, with your name, address, and date of birth printed below your signature. If you are currently a minor, under the age of 18, the request should be signed by your parent or legal guardian, with both your name and your parent or legal guardian's name printed below the signature, along with your date of birth. If you do not make a timely request for exclusion in the manner specified, you will remain in the class and be bound by the judgment in the case.

Any member of the Class who does not wish to be excluded from the Class may seek leave of the court to appear as a named class co-representative, upon good cause shown on noticed motion.

If you do not request exclusion, you will be represented by the Plaintiffs and their counsel, who have been appointed Class Counsel by the Court, unless you enter an appearance through the counsel of your own choice. You are not required to obtain your own counsel, but if you choose to do so, your counsel must file an appearance on your behalf on or before November 19, 2001(60 days from the dissemination date ordered by the Court), and serve copies upon the attorneys for the Plaintiffs and Defendants listed below.

Artist with 'quality and originality' can't paint redwood mural

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL ARTIST and sand sculptor Scott Dosch's plan for a mural on the wall of a building that backs onto Junipero was unanimously shot down by the Carmel Planning Commission this week.

Commissioners cited the Committee for Art in Public Places' 3-1 recommendation that the mural be denied as their reason for voting against the project. Last year, the planning commission asked CAPP to consider the piece because it would be visible to the public even though it was on private property.

In suggesting denial, CAPP members argued that "the artwork did not meet the integrity of what should be visible on a public wall and that such a proposal might open the door for many more applications," according to assistant planner Jaci Abadilla's staff report.

Dosch said he would not be paid for the job — he wanted to do it "for the love of art" — and that the mural, featuring large redwoods, would not be an "assault on the ambience."

"I do know what I'm doing," he told the commission.

Nonetheless, the commission opted to accept CAPP's recommendation and voted to deny the application.

"The question before us doesn't really pertain to Scott Dosch's qualifications — that's not to my mind what's before us," commissioner Pope Coleman said. "The city council appointed CAPP to give advice to us and to them from an artistic side, and I for one have seen no cause to go against their advice."

The other commissioners agreed.

"This is one of those I would love to support; because there's no question about the quality and originality of the artist," chair Frank Wasko said before calling for a vote. "But I support groups when they are set up to field these questions, and when they have expertise which I don't possess and they make a recommendation, I'm not going to go against it."

Acting community planning and building director Chip Rerig reminded the commission that CAPP, like the city's historic preservation committee, is only advisory.

"In the end, you can use their recommendation," he said. "However, this is the body that ultimately decides."

This month, California-American Water Company is mailing all customers a copy of the 2000 Annual Water Quality Report. This report summarizes the hundreds of tests we conduct to ensure we deliver the highest possible quality water.

A Commitment to Water Quality

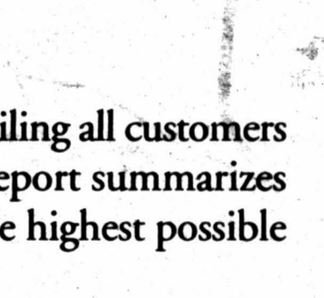
California-American Water Company's commitment to water quality means we do everything we can to ensure the water we provide to your family is pure and refreshing.

We test water before it enters our system, once it leaves our plants, and we also routinely test it in locations around the community, to make sure the water we deliver to your home meets or exceeds all health and safety standards.

Our commitment doesn't end with testing. We engage in preventative maintenance to stop problems from ever occurring. We routinely replace filters, install new equipment and perform day-to-day maintenance.

From our Family to Yours

Our certified laboratory and nationally recognized main lab in Belleville, Illinois provide detailed scientific data that we mail to each customer every year. You can also view our Annual Water Quality Report on our Internet website, www.calamwater.com.



California-American Water Company is dedicated to protecting the environment while bringing you quality water at a fair price. On behalf of all our staff, thank you for the opportunity to be of service.

'Annie Get Your Gun' plays Forest Theater

Four siblings in one musical a test of family sanity

By ANNE PAPINEAU

TO THE list of noted acting family dynasties (think Barrymore, Fonda, Redgrave) add the name Asa. Evan, Cameron, Isabelle and Cade Asa have grown up within clapping distance of Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater. With combined ages totaling nearly 25 years, this awesome foursome can be seen live Thursdays through Sundays in the Forest Theater Guild staging of "Annie Get Your Gun."

And if truth be told, they're just in the show to have a good time.

"We don't have any sanity to keep" is the assessment of their father, David, who with wife Alison ferried the siblings to six weeks of "Annie Get Your Gun" (AGYG for short) rehearsals at points around the Monterey Peninsula. Now the family is settled for the summer and sanity triumphs.

The children know the ropes.

"We just go to the theater really early and get in our costumes and put our makeup on. We do it ourselves," explains Isabelle, theater veteran, who just completed second grade in Mr. Mendez' class at Carmel River School. Isabelle and eldest brother Evan auditioned for the production and were accepted. They're among Annie's siblings: Isabelle plays Nellie and Evan is Little Jake.

Isabelle boasts the lengthiest résumé, having danced with the Carmel Ballet Academy and appeared in such local theatricals as "Peter Pan" last summer and "Magic," staged by Walt deFaria.

Her twin brother, Cameron, also pushing 8, entered "AGYG" through a process of assimilation.

"I'm part of the ensemble. I fill in as one of the dancers. I don't have a name, but it's fun," he says.

But can it really be all fun? Of course not. Isabelle recalls one evening when "someone skipped like five lines." Troupers all, she and her castmates covered for the offending forgetter.

"The kids love it. It gives them focus. They enjoy being

Don't give up hope: Beach and park films may still be in offing

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

FILM AFICIONADOS have been getting edgy, with rumors flying that Films in the Forest would not be sponsoring a free showing at Carmel Beach and Devendorf Park this year.

Roger Parkes, president of the Forest Theater Guild which has been running the Films in the Forest program since 1995, told The Pine Cone the guild would have difficulty mounting showings away from their Forest Theater venue this season because it would "diffuse their focus" in producing "Kiss Me Kate" and "Annie Get Your Gun" at the venerable Carmel-by-the-Sea outdoor amphitheater.

"This is the first year the guild has produced an all-student production ['Kiss Me Kate'], and we're really getting back into community theater with 'Annie Get Your Gun,'" he said. Parkes said there are a number of new board members. "We have a whole new group of DIVORCE is tough.

But at a certain point, there's just no other choice.

How many times can you possibly give the spouse another chance, after they keep messing up?

Tearful promises, firm resolve, sweet words, even written contracts . . . they go only so far.

And deep down, you know those bad habits are, by now, ingrained.

So you start fantasizing about the one who's dependable, who's neat, who's efficient, who's punctual . . .

Now I just need to figure out how to divorce from myself.

IT WAS with an eye to the future that jazz aficionados gathered at the Jack's Peak home of Bill and Shelly Cullin on June 25 to enjoy the talents of JazzMasters Workshop (JMW) students while nibbling on hors d'oeuvres.

The relatively new JMW is the brainchild of noted guitarist Bruce Forman, for many years also a "traveling clinician" — i.e. coach for young musicians — with the Monterey Jazz Festival. This program provides rising jazz musicians with mentors through classes with jazz VIPs. Masters such as George Benson and Pat Metheny have already been lined up.

"It's patterned after my own experience," Bruce explained.

And every Monday afternoon at 3:30, aspiring jazz artists can gather at the Carmel Youth Center for jamming sessions with such pros. (The Seaside Boys and Girls Club, and satellites in San Francisco and Oakland are already in the works.)

With host Bill Cullin standing and hostess Shelly Cullin in the foreground, some of the guests at the JazzMasters Workshop evening reception included Pamela Forman, Katie Kreeger, Gary Ibsen and Shawn Halan.

Shelly Cullin, "one of the last cabaret singers around," as she puts it, said: "It's wonderful to know there is a new generation of fine musicians coming up, thanks to our community's support and Bruce's talent and generosity."

On this day Bruce had gathered musician buddies of his, bassist Bryan McConnell and drummer Mike McKinley — all of whom hold impressive resumes — to open the "show" featuring teen prodigies Ross Garren, Bryce Hall and Daniel Lobenburg, who later accompanied Shelly with her tunes, too.

Ross' parents Mary and Lloyd slipped in during the show, along with Bryce's dad Scott.

Gary Ibsen was so blown away by the kids' talent that he's thinking of using them in his next TomatoFest, coming up in the fall.

Katie Kreeger was there as a friend of Shelly, who's her tennis partner. They both married Navy men, Bill having been a WWII Battle of Midway hero who is now featured at an exhibit at the Naval Postgrad library. Though Katie has traveled, she's a local girl, with her parents, Glenn and Carole Hoskins, still living here.

Pine Needles

By Sissi Maleki

Bruce's wife Pamela is no slouch in the music department, either, though her passion is country music singing. Husband and wife have one common passion, horses, which is how they met.

And when retired Dr. Jean Belin is not riding horses, he's a "jazz maniac," too, he claims.

Joan Lindeman, a painter who shows at Simic Galleries and a designer who stages homes, moved here from Sacramento a year ago. She, too, was amazed by the youngsters.

"They were awesome!" she exclaimed. "I usually listen to music with my eyes closed and you just can't tell they're kids just by hearing them."

JMW is currently seeking effective board members, (which should be a blast of a job!). Call 659-4654 if interested.

players," he said. "We just wanted to stay focused."

In the meanwhile, the cavalry has appeared at the crest of the hill in the form of Carmel restaurateur Greg Cellitti who has applied for permits for a film showing at the beach and in the park. Cellitti said it goes before the City Council at the July 10 meeting.

Announcing the films selected for showing would be "premature," Cellitti said, but hinted the beach film selected is a campy sci-fi with close personal ties to Carmel.

Meanwhile, Films in the Forest continues with Tuesday and Wednesday showings at dusk at the Forest Theater, Mountain View at Santa Rita, as follows: July 3, "An Officer and a Gentleman," with no film on July 4; July 10, "Three Days of the Condor"; July 11, "Suspicion"; July 17, "Heaven Can Wait"; July 18, "Paper Moon"; July 24, "The Party"; July 25, "The Wrong Box"; Sunday, July 29, student films to be announced; July 31, "White Heat"; and concluding Aug. 1 with "Bicycle Thief."

Individual tickets are $5 at the "door" of the Forest Theater, with children under 5 admitted free. The ticket office can be reached at 626-1681.

around other kids their age. They enjoy acting out," observes dad David. He has gotten in on the "AGYG" act by "sort of working backstage. I corral the kids when they get out of control."

A trickle of theatrical blood runs through their veins. David's maternal grandfather, Ted Cunningham, was a thespian and writer here who later worked in productions on Broadway and in Memphis, Tenn.

Mom Alison Asa also joins in the effort as a general helper and sometime food provider.

And the youngest, Cade, who is just over 2, appears onstage "with a little luck."

"My youngest son wanted to come down and see the shows," said David. "It was a hoot to have him wear his cowboy outfit and play his harmonica. But it didn't work out that way. He just wanted to run around the stage, so he's sort of in and out of the show, depending on his mood."

Ah, show biz.

Janet (Rachel Binder) makes nice with dull spouse Derek (Jack Stauffer) in "Accomplice" at Magic Circle Center in Carmel Valley Village.

Magic Circle scores again with Holmes' 'Accomplice'

By DEBORAH WHITTLESEY SHARP

"ACCOMPLICE," by playwright and song-writer Rupert Holmes, currently at Magic Circle Center in Carmel Valley, leads off with a face-paced, tightly written first act that gives the audience plenty of comedy-thriller twists: mistaken identities, a sudden shift in direction and a show-stopping revelation a split second before intermission.

Unfortunately, the second act goes a bit flabby, perhaps because the play has been called a spoof of the likes of "Sleuth" and "Deathtrap" and the twists, turns, and tricks are laid on a bit thick or perhaps because a good bit of the second act is theater banter between the actors.

Nonetheless, Magic Circle's "Accomplice" is definitely worth seeing for its uniformly strong acting, some screamingly funny moments and the magnificent set of "Dorping Mill," a contemporary English country home.

Rachel Binder as Janet, wife of the maddeningly dull Derek, is especially strong in the first act as she maneuvers through tongue-twisting lines and manipulations of Derek without breaking pace. Jack Stauffer, who has already proved his talent for pivotal short roles in Magic Circle's production of "Sylvia," shines again. And Lucinda Ulrich carries off the role of a stupefyingly dumb blond beautifully.

Despite a silly sequence about taking off a bra and an overly contrived plot, the second act manages to keep the audience engaged. Although Holmes breaks the dramatic tension of the first act by dwelling on a lot of amusing theater talk, he does finally deliver a truly shocking ending and a surprising accomplice.

"Accomplice" runs through July 22 on Friday and Saturday nights at 7:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2 at the Magic Circle Center in Carmel Valley Village. For reservations, call 659-1108.

Carmel puts out call for original plays

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

THE 24th annual Festival of Firsts Playwriting Competition, sponsored by the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea's Community and Cultural Department, has been announced, with a call for original, unproduced, full-length stage plays.

A prize of up to $1,000 for the winning play will be awarded.

There is a $15 non-refundable registration fee for each script submitted. Scripts must be postmarked no later than Aug. 31, 2001, contained in a binder, and must include a cast list, synopsis and entry form.

The winning play will be produced within four months of the winner being notified.

Entry forms may be picked up at Sunset Center, San Carlos at Ninth.

Participants should send all entries to Sunset Center, P.O. Box 1950, Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA 93921. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of the manuscript.

EAT A DINNER, SOLVE A CRIME

"Par Four for Murder" is the name of the murder mystery dinner and audience-interaction theater set for 7 p.m., Friday July 6 at Quail Lodge Resort & Golf Club, 8000 Valley Greens Drive, Carmel. The mystery will be enacted during a cocktail reception and three-course dinner and unfold throughout the evening. Characters in the play, produced by Mystery by Design, include a stuffed-shirt club member, a hapless golf pro and a writer of sleazy detective novels. Each table of diners will act as a team to solve the mystery, with a prize to be awarded. Cost of the evening is $75 per person. For information and tickets, call 620-8886.

FREE CONCERT SET AT FOREST THEATER

At 2 p.m. every Sunday Carmel's Outdoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, supplies the setting for a free concert.

The Sunday, July 1 offering is the David Morwood Trio with Bobby Phillips and Bob Jones. They will perform "What's Jazz," a history of jazz that includes Be-bop and New Orleans style jazz. The Jazz Birds will take the stage Sunday, July 8.

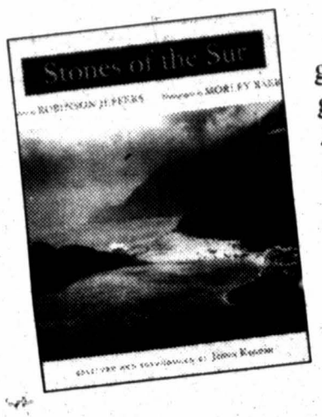
Carmel's Baer, Jeffers and Weston enshrined in new books



MORLEY BAER's photographic images have a "spare grandeur" — to quote Robert Zaller of Drexel University — that complement Robinson Jeffers' "uncompromising verse."

The poet and the photographer come together symbiotically in a breathtaking 164-page book just produced by Stanford University Press ($60) with James Karman having selected both poems and photographs.

Before Baer died in 1995, he had planned to produce just such a book as this and asked Karman to be his collaborator.

Karman has paired more than 50 of Baer's images of Big Sur with Jeffers' poems that express Jeffers' "mystical experience with stone." Thus has "Stones of the Sur" been brought to completion.

In an excerpt from one of Jeffers' more somber poems, "Thurso's Landing," these lines illustrate a darkly austere Baer 1982 photo of Owings Beach:

I'll tell you
What the world's like: like a stone for no reason falling in the night from a cliff in the hills, that makes a lonely
Noise and a spark in the hollow darkness, and nobody sees and nobody cares.

Sensitive selections such as this make of "Stones" a remarkable accomplishment. You can meet author/editor Karman, the man responsible for this artistic fusion, from 4 to 6 p.m. on Saturday, June 30 at the Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Center, Carmel. Karman is on the board of the Tor House Foundation.

Frances Baer, Morley Baer's widow, will be present at the celebration, as will May Waldroup, Thunderbird Bookshop owner, who has counted the Baers among her personal friends.

For information, call 624-1803.

Independence Day rocks; Jazz & Blues Company swings

JAZZ & BLUES Company favorite Karrin Allyson returns to Carmel this Friday (June 29) to celebrate the release of her latest CD, "Ballads." A tribute to the legendary jazz composer John Coltrane, "Ballads" covers eight Coltrane classics immortalized in his '60s recording of the same title. Standards like "All or Nothing at All," "Say It (Over and Over Again)" and "You Don't Know What Love Is" are given Allyson's personal touch.

Karrin Allyson

This rising young jazz vocalist has released six previous albums on the Concord jazz label and on her seventh she is accompanied by an ensemble of some of today's finest musicians — James Wilson on piano, John Patitucci on bass, Lewis Nash on drums, plus special guest saxophonists Bob Berg, James Carter and Steve Wilson.

Woody Woodhouse

She performs tonight accompanied by guitarist Danny Embry, drummer Tod Strait and Tom Warrington on tenor sax.

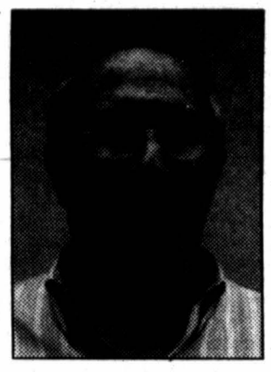
Appearing this Saturday night (June 30) at the same venue is jazz and blues vocalist Woody Woodhouse. A student of classical voice with George Shirley of the Metropolitan Opera, Woodhouse learned to sing the blues with legendary bluesman T-Bone Walker.

Another Jazz & Blues Company favorite, Woodhouse has earned the nickname "Mr. Versatility" for his ability to excel in so many styles. He will be accompanied by locals Andy Weis on drums, Dan Robbins on bass and Martan Mann on piano. Jazz & Blues Company shows begin at 7:30 p.m. For reservations call 624-6431.

The annual Pops and Rocks Independence Day Festival presented by Graniterock will this year feature five-time Grammy Award winner B.J. Thomas. The singer, best known for his hit "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head," will be accompanied by the 70-member Monterey and Santa Cruz Symphony Orchestras. The Joe Sharino Band will perform after the fireworks until 10:30 p.m. The event takes place July Fourth at the A.R. Wilson Quarry in Aromas. For more info and tickets call 768-2007 or (888) ROCK100.

Promoter Sandy Shore presents two concerts within one week: British mellow jazz group Acoustic Alchemy on Monday, July 2 at the Marriott Hotel in Monterey; and jazz artist Diana Krall at the Monterey Plaza on Sunday, July 8.

Co-founding Alchemist Greg Carmichael has put together a revamped Acoustic Alchemy that includes longtime sidemen bassist Frank Felix, guitarists John Parsons and Miles Gilderdale plus keyboardist Terry Disley. The new lineup's first recording, "The Beautiful Game," was released last year. The Grammy Award winning group performs two intimate shows at Ferrante's atop the Marriott at 6 and 8:30 p.m.



Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Some tickets are still available for the July 8 return engagement of jazz pianist/vocalist Diana Krall at the Monterey Plaza. Krall, the hottest artist in jazz today, is currently busy touring and recording in Los Angeles. Her last album, "When I Look Into Your Eyes" was the first jazz album to be nominated for the "Best Album of the Year" Grammy in more than 20 years. Krall has transcended her genre and she puts on one spellbinding show. There are two shows (1 and 4 p.m.) and if you are lucky you may still be able to get tickets. Check out the Sandy Shore Presents website at www.smoothjazz.com.

Major kudos to the History and Art Association for putting on last week's Monterey Pop Symposium. Although not that well attended, the symposium was a classy affair that offered a candid glimpse into an important page of Monterey's history — a weekend that helped shape a generation.

separate artistic body of work from his earlier photographs, many of which were revealing close-ups of all things natural, and studio shots of still lifes.

In those last active years as a photographer before Parkinson's disease took its toll — although still recording rocks that resemble moonscapes — Weston pulled back with his camera, letting the viewer in on the bigger picture, as it were. Many of these, especially some of the seascapes and the forests of Point Lobos, are forebodingly atmospheric. One such, Point Lobos, 1938, has been selected as the cover photograph.

But playfulness, verging on broad humor, emerges in many of his affectionate family photographs: of his wife Charis, in the altogether, and of his sons, Neil, Chandler, Brett and Cole. And there are photographs of Edward Weston himself by Ansel Adams that are splendidly set in the nature they both so loved.

Published by The Art Institute of Chicago (clothbound, 144-pages, with 108 tritones, $45), the text and selections are by the institute's curator of photography, David Travis, a specialist in the modernist period of photography. Travis has written a delightful text to the book and divided it into six essays: Cole's Story, Carmel and Point Lobos, Freedom and a Home, The Third Period, The War Years, and The Last Years. In this final essay, Travis, with an exquisite sense of rightness, quotes this columnist's favorite poem of all time: Wallace Stevens' "The Poem that Took the Place of a Mountain."

Choosing essay form, rather than the usual run-on text, allows the author to approach each subject with an intimacy that might be lost in a standard text format.

The book was produced to accompany two exhibitions of Weston's work: the first at The Art Institute of Chicago, and the second at The San Francisco Museum of Modern Art. This latter is planned for March 1 through July 9, 2002.

The book is available now at The Thunderbird Bookshop, Carmel, Bay Books, Monterey and other local bookstores.

NOTICE OF REQUEST FOR RATE INCREASE

Garrapata Water Company notifies its customers that it has requested authority from the California Public Utilities Commission to increase its gross revenues by $2,283 or 6.4% in 2001 to adjust for an increase in purchased power costs pursuant to recent electricity rate increases for PG&E that were authorized by CPUC Decision Nos. 01-03-82 & 01-05-064.

The requested rate increase will not result in a rate of return in excess of that last found reasonable for Garrapata Water company.

The present rates have been in effect since December 13, 2000.

A comparison of the present rates and the rates proposed follows:

Rates Per Year:	Present Rates	Proposed Rates
For each residential dwelling connected below main tank, which is not specified below	$726.00	$772.72
For each residential dwelling connected above main tank and below first upper reservoir	$823.00	$875.97
For each residential dwelling connected above first upper reservoir	$856.00	$911.02
For Rocky Point Restaurant and Damon Ranch	$1,233.00	$1,312.91

Protests and Responses

There are two ways to respond to this notice. You can send a protest to the CPUC and the utility, or you can send a response to the CPUC, with a copy to the utility if you wish.

A protest is a document objecting to the granting in whole or in part of the authority sought in this advice letter.

A protest must be mailed within 20 days of the day the California Public Utilities Commission accepts the advice letter for filing. The filing date is the day the advice letter was put on the CPUC Calendar. The Calendar is available at the CPUC's Website at www.cpuc.ca.gov. A protest must state the facts constituting the grounds for the protest, the effect of approval of the advice letter might have on the protestant, and the reasons the protestant believes the advice letter, or part of it, is not justified. If the protest request an evidentiary hearing, the protest must state the facts the protestant would present at an evidentiary hearing to support its request for whole or partial denial of the advice of the advice letter. The utility must respond to a protest within five days.

A response is a document that does not object to the authority sought, but nevertheless presents information that the party tendering the response believes would be useful to the Commission in acting on the request.

All protests and responses should be sent to:
California Public Utilities Commission, Water Division
505 Van Ness Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94102
Fax: (415) 703-4426
e-mail: water-division@cpuc.ca.gov

All protests should be sent to this utility to:
Garrapata Water Company
36652 Highway 1 - Coast Route
Monterey, CA 93940
Fax: (831) 624-9675

If you have not received a reply to your protest from the utility within 10 business days, contact Donald M. Layne at (831) 624-8877.

The CPUC welcomes your comments. If you wish to protest or respond to this rate request, you may submit written comments to the CPUC to the address listed above. Simply state that you are writing about Advice Letter No. 21 of Garrapata Water Company. If you need help, you may contact the Public Advisor's office of the CPUC by writing them at 505 Van Ness Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94102.

A copy of Garrapata Water Company advice letter No. 21 may be inspected and further information obtained from its office at 36652 Highway 1, Coast Route, Monterey, CA 93940, or from the California Public Utilities Commission. Water Division, 505 Van Ness Avenue, San Francisco, CA 94102.

ORDINANCE NO. 01-02

AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING SEWER SERVICE CHARGES FOR FISCAL YEAR 2001-02 AND THEREAFTER, PROVIDING FOR THE COLLECTION OF SUCH CHARGES ON THE TAX ROLL, AND PROVIDING FURTHER THAT THIS ORDINANCE AND THE CHARGES ESTABLISHED HEREBY AND THE TAX COLLECTION PROCEDURE SELECTED HEREIN SHALL REMAIN IN EFFECT UNTIL EITHER THE SAID CHARGES ARE REVISED OR THIS ORDINANCE IS OTHERWISE AMENDED OR REPEALED

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE CARMEL AREA WASTEWATER DISTRICT DOES ORDAIN AS FOLLOWS:

1. Sewer Service Charges. Sewer service charges for services rendered are hereby adopted and levied upon all users of the District facilities, for fiscal year 2001-02, and all fiscal years hereafter until the charges established herein are modified or this ordinance is repealed, at the same rates set forth on Exhibit "A" which is attached hereto and incorporated herein by this reference thereto.

2. Collection on Tax Roll. Pursuant to California Health and Safety Code §5473, the District hereby elects to have the aforesaid sewer service charges for services rendered by the District collected on the tax roll in the same general manner, by the same persons and at the same time as the collection of general property taxes by the County of Monterey.

3. Duration. This ordinance, the service charges established hereby and the collection procedure elected herein shall continue in full force and effect until either a) the said sewer service charges are revised or b) this ordinance is otherwise specifically amended or repealed.

4. Publication. Following adoption, this ordinance shall be published once in a newspaper published in the District.

5. Effective Date. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force one (1) week after the date it is published in the newspaper, or July 1, 2001, whichever is later.

PASSED AND ADOPTED at a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Carmel Area Wastewater District duly held on June 21, 2001, by the following vote:

AYES: BOARD MEMBERS: Congleton, Haseltine, Kohn, Stevens, Townsend
NOES: BOARD MEMBERS: None
ABSENT: BOARD MEMBERS: None

Special/Unlisted users are assessed rates based on their loadings for Biochemical Oxygen Demand (BOD), Suspended Solids (SS), and Flow (millions of gallons) multiplied by the following unit rates:
$0.352455793/lb. of BOD; $0.388970306/lb. of SS; $2,563.73/MG of flow

The Carmel Area Wastewater District collects, treats and disposes of wastewater from more than 6,400 residential and commercial connections in Carmel and surrounding areas and portions of lower Carmel Valley.

The fixed rate user fees include funds required for current operation and maintenance costs.

BID

self-governed by the business community."

This would be quite different from a typical tax levied by the city, with its revenue mixed into the general city budget and then fought over by interest groups, BID proponents said.

The possibility of a "trickle-down effect" for the town's businesses and community groups is another major selling point for the BID, according to Sutton. "When the inns are full, we all do well."

Pacific Repertory Theater's Stephen Moorer said the city's municipal budget would also benefit. "For every dollar we get, the city gets $13," he said.

The BID Research Committee, formed by McCloud, created a rate structure that assigned the highest rates to the hospitality industry. In return, hotels and restaurants would have more say in whether the BID should stay in effect.

An advisory board with business categories equally represented, would decide how the BID money would be spent.

BID opponents, led by Tuck Box owner Jody LeTowt, believe the district's efforts to bring more tourists to town would not necessarily help all businesses. In April, he sent a letter to most of the city's business owners complaining that the BID would really be a "Business Advertising District," which he called, "BAD."

Patricia Terwilliger, who was a member of the BID Research Committee but continues to have reservations about the district, said, "Every business has a different idea of who their customers are which may not agree with where others want their ad dollars spent."

Wilson pointed out that, for most businesses, the BID assessment would be so small it could easily be passed through to the customers.

"For example, a retail store would be assessed just 10 cents on a sale of $100," Wilson said.

But even some BID supporters said adding the assessment to customers' tabs will not be realistic for many businesses.

At retail's high end, Jones & Terwilliger Gallery co-owner Barbara Jones said, "We have to absorb the cost because we can't charge clients more than the going prices just because we work in Carmel."

'Every business has a different idea of who their customers are which may not agree with where others want their ad dollars spent.'

— Patricia Terwilliger

At the lower end of retail and other businesses, the administrative burden of handling such small tax amounts would make it a hassle to pass them through, some business owners said.

According to Salinas Cash Registers owner Michael Mulligan, it would be "a nightmare" to tack on a tax of .0005 of each dollar, the assessment rate for gas stations, grocery stores and service business

"Most registers only go to two decimal points," he explained, "and there's no way to program any annual caps."

This issue is one of LeTowt's biggest complaints. "Ultimately, it will come out of our pockets," he said.

Even Sutton, Research Committee chairman, and At Home's Kathie Ritter, former CBA president, plan to absorb the cost.

"Telling an out-of-state customer that he can save on tax if we ship is a big selling point," she said.

Wilson gets impatient with those who fail to see "the incredible bargain" of joining the Monterey County Visitors & Convention Bureau, a planned BID expense.

"Carmel puts in $182,000 and we get to be part of a $3 million marketing campaign — where else could we get a deal like that?" he asked. "And we could hire a person who would get leads from MCVCB for group sales for the off-peak seasons."

MCVCB CEO Burke Pease confirmed that without being a member, "Carmel will not have the same status as other partners who contribute financially."

Last week, the city council voted to continuing spending $100,000 of tax dollars this year on advertising to bring tourists to town, especially mid-week. Every year, getting that money allocated has been a struggle. Ultimately, the continued marketing of Carmel may well hinge on the outcome of the BID proposal, its proponents said.

Long before they can take the BID to the council for action, proponents of the district will have to get more support from Carmel's businesses.

"We still think that business owners will favor the BID if they have a better understanding of how much it will cost them and what the money will be used for," Hoover said.

PEARL HARBOR

Lt. Cagwin, then 24, told his 21-year-old bride to get dressed and handed her a snifter of brandy.

"I think he felt that would help me somehow," she chuckled. "I never drank before in my life."

Leaving their small quarters near Wheeler Air Base, the two ran to the military quadrangle surrounded by offices and barracks and were immediately overcome by the chaos.

"The men were running all over the place, half dressed, screaming and angry," she said. Her husband handed her the .45-caliber she had learned to shoot, and left her in search of orders.

It was the last time she would see or hear of him for four long days.

Back in the neighborhood with several other Army wives crowded around a radio, she listened for any news or instructions the announcer might offer. They were to fill their bathtubs with water because the Japanese had poisoned the reservoirs, the announcer warned, and should keep an eye out for foreign invaders dressed in Army fatigues.

"They told us that everyone who had cars on the island should go to the airfield and leave their cars there so that the Japanese could not land," she said. The wives and children were told to get ready to evacuate the base.

Cagwin ran outside in frantic search of a pregnant friend — whom she did not find — and was chased up the street by a Japanese plane, she said.

Fearing a land invasion, U.S. soldiers dug trenches in front of the homes along Cagwin's street and blacked out the windows. As the sun dipped below the horizon, she rushed to pack valuables and essentials: insurance papers, her husband's West Point ring and some clothing.

Terrified by the thought of Japanese soldiers stalking her in the dark, she was convinced she could feel someone's breath on the back of her neck as she packed her things in the middle of her darkened home.

"I was frozen, because I never locked the doors, so they could come in at any time," she said.

That night, a convoy was formed to take women and children to a schoolhouse in Honolulu, about three miles from Pearl Harbor.

"We got in an old pineapple truck that had hauled pineapples the day before and it was sticky," she remembered.

The moonlit night made cover difficult, she said. And she later discovered the convoy was not led by someone who knew where she was going but by a panicked woman who jumped in her car and yelled at everyone to follow her.

"We would stop and go down a winding road, and we stopped right next to Pearl Harbor for about five minutes," she said.

She peeked out from her hiding place beneath a tarp and caught a glimpse of the mayhem. The image has stayed with her the rest of her life: Pearl Harbor in flames.

"I could see all of the burning ships, some on their sides, some with their noses diving into the water — it was the most horrible mess I've ever seen," she said. A small child beside her became violently ill at the sight.

As they waited, a stranger who looked Asian attempted to climb into the truck, according to Cagwin.

"I pulled out my pistol and told him, 'If you get into this bus, you're a dead man,' and he ran," she said.

After spending a night in a schoolhouse crowded with more than 100 crying children and women — including one who gave birth that night — Cagwin ended up in a Honolulu home, suffering from delayed shock and hunger. She hadn't eaten since a dinner-dance at Hickham Air Base the night before the bombing.

The military asked the women to put addresses on all the telegrams pouring into the island.

"We would sit in the bathroom and read the telegrams," she said. "And most said, 'If you're all right, don't bother to answer,' which tickled the hell out of us."

The women were permitted to return to their homes several days after the bombing, but told to prepare to be shipped back to the mainland.

"There were probably four days when I had no idea whether my husband was alive and he had no idea whether I was alive," she said.

The two were reunited shortly after, but just after Christmas, Lee Cagwin was sent to China and Jackie Cagwin returned to Carmel.

They didn't see each other again until April 1945, a separation of more than three years. As U.S. forces fought their way across the Pacific, Lee Cagwin was thrown into one of the war's bloodiest battles, Guadalcanal, where he won a distinguished service medal.

A pre-battle wedding

But, had she not moved to Carmel in the '30s, she would never have met Leland Cagwin.

Jackie Cagwin — daughter of renowned artist and Carmel Art Association co-founder Howard E. Smith — hailed from Rockport, Mass., and came with her family to live in Carmel in 1935, when she was 13.

A mere eight years later, when she hosted a cocktail party that included several Ft. Ord military men, she met New York-born Leland Cagwin, a Westpoint graduate and Army Lieutenant at the base.

Two weeks later, they were married, on May 11, 1941.

At that time, Cagwin said, she knew nothing of life in the Army. She soon discovered she was not alone.

"All of the girls who were at Pearl Harbor were young, and most of them were newly married, so none of us knew one thing about military life at all," she said.

Over the years, she learned all about the loneliness and hardship of being an Army wife.

"We had been married 12 years before we were together longer than we were separated — and we had three children in between World War II and the Korean War," she said.

Their 60-year marriage almost failed to materialize when a minister said he could not marry them, "because we had not known each other long enough," Cagwin said. But she fibbed, telling him they had actually met at the Salinas train station three months earlier.

"Years later, the minister told me that had he not married us, it would have been the greatest sin of his career."

For decades after the bombing, Cagwin and three close friends who had lived adjacent to Wheeler Air Base would call each other every year on Pearl Harbor Day. Now, she and her husband are the only survivors of that once-close group.

"One lesson I learned that stayed with me all my life is that life is more important than any possession you could possibly have," she said. "After the bombing, life had a different meaning to me — I never went anywhere with my small children without holding their hands."

MILESTONES

PRISCILLA GIBSON HICKS, Ph.D., 74, of Carmel died June 5 in a Chicago hospital.

A scholar and retired university professor whose academic career extended 50 years, Mrs. Hicks had been a regular Carmel visitor before moving here in 1987. She served as president of the Monterey Peninsula Wellesley Club, on Harrison Memorial Library's special committee to recommend book purchases and on the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation's committee for the annual Jeffers Prize for Poetry, a national competition.

A native of Pennsylvania, she earned a B.A. with honors in English literature from Wellesley College. She earned an M.A. from the University of Michigan and a Ph.D. from Boston University.

Mrs. Hicks taught at Oberlin College, the University of Connecticut, Mount Holyoke and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst from which she retired in 1987. She was a specialist in 19th century English and American literature, in particular the works of novelist and critic Henry James, on whom she completed a book-length study at the time of her death. She was a member of the Modern Language Association as well as the Henry James and Herman Melville societies.

She is survived by her husband, John H. Hicks of Carmel; daughter Alison Hicks Greifenstein of Pennsylvania; and her sister-in-law Mary Ellen Hicks of Carmel. Memorial contributions may be made to the Harrison Memorial Library or to Wellesley College Student Aid.

A celebration of life service will be announced at a later date.

JOAN DOUGHTY THOMPSON, 81, a longtime area volunteer, died June 6. Born in 1920 in Ridgewood, N.J., she had lived in Carmel for 52 years.

Known to her friends as "Joanie," Mrs. Thompson was an active volunteer for the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula Auxiliary. Her 40-plus years of service to CHOMP totalled more than 8,000 hours. She helped create the Junior Auxiliary program, known formerly as "candy stripers." She was the former chairman of CHOMP's Fountain Court, and was a recognizable face over the years at the hospital's snack bar.

She was also a volunteer for Children's Home Society, 20-40 Club, Lawyers' Wives of Monterey County, Carmel Little League and All Saints Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Thompson was a member of the Beach and Tennis Club, where she was an avid tennis and bridge player. She was also a member at John Gardiner's Tennis Ranch in Carmel Valley, where she played tennis and worked in the pro shop.

She is survived by four sons, Lawrence of Irvine, William and Cole of Monterey and Douglas of Marina; two daughters, Nancy Eskilon of Santa Cruz and Beth Carpenter of Irvine; 14 grandchildren and nieces, nephews and cousins. She was preceded in death by her husband, Ralph W. Thompson, Jr., a longtime Monterey Peninsula attorney who died in February 2000, and her two sisters, Jeanne D. Allen and Kathleen Doughty.

The family suggests memorial contributions be sent to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula Auxiliary, P.O. Box HH, Monterey, CA 93942-1085, or to the donor's favorite charity.

NELLO PAUL TORRI, M.D., who served as a family practice physician on the Monterey Peninsula from 1951 to 1987, died June 8 at Hospice House in Monterey. He was 83.

Born in Putnam, Conn., Dr. Torri graduated from the University of Michi-gan in 1942 and served in the U.S. Army from 1943 to 1945. He graduated from the Uni-versity of Chicago School of Medicine in 1945. Dr. Torri then worked with the U.S. Public Health Service from 1946 to 1949.

He was the first physician to set up an office in Carmel Valley and later he moved to Pacific Grove, where he was associated with Dr. William Carnazzo. In 1960 he opened his own practice at a newly built medical complex at 1010 Cass St., Monterey.

Dr. Torri was a member of the Church of the Wayfarer in Carmel; a retired member of the California Medical Association; past member, Monterey County Medical Association; and a member of the alumni associations of the universities of Michigan and Chicago.

He is survived by his wife of 55 years, Arleene of Monterey; son Nello of Los Angeles; daughter Lisa Torri Schwartz of Seaside; two grandsons and two great-grandsons.

Memorials are suggested to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula; Hospice of the Central Coast or the Church of the Wayfarer, Carmel.

CATHARINE RUDDEROW BOLLES, a resident of Carmel Valley Manor since 1975, died June 12. She was 90.

Born in Philadelphia, she was a graduate of Springside School of Germantown, Penn. and received her B.A. degree from Mount Holyoke in 1933. She worked for more than 20 years as an administrative secretary and, for the last five years of her career, was employed in that capacity by Mrs. Paul Flanders in Carmel.

She is survived by two nephews and was preceded in death by her husband, Edwin Bolles, in 1962.

Memorials are suggested to the Carmel Valley Manor Employee Holiday Fund, 8545 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel, CA 93923.

DALE EBERLY of Carmel Valley, a businessman and auto dealer who owned Salinas Valley Ford from 1959 to 1980, died June 21. He was 88.

Born in North Dakota, Mr. Eberly earned his bachelor's degree at the University of Wisconsin Business School and served in the U.S. Navy from 1943 to 1945.

A self-made man, Mr. Eberly was an active member of the Monterey Peninsula Unitarian Church and the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, a lifetime member of the NAACP and was very active in the Democratic Party.

He was an excellent golfer and enjoyed walking his dogs in Garland Park. At his previous home, in Oakland, he was a Scoutmaster for the Boy Scouts of America and followed the activities of the State of the World Forum. With his wife, Natalie, Mr. Eberly traveled widely, including a trip to the North Pole on a Russian icebreaker.

Memorial services will begin at 3 p.m. Sunday, July 1 at the Unitarian Church of the Monterey Peninsula, Highway 1 and Aguajito Road.

Memorials are suggested to the Boys and Girls Club of the Monterey Peninsula, 1332 La Salle Ave., Seaside, CA 93955, or the Salvation Army, Box 1884, Monterey, CA 93942.

FLORENCE EVELYN STECK, a resident of Del Mesa Carmel for five years, died June 12 at age 87.

A native of Toledo, Ohio, Mrs. Steck received her nursing degree from Ohio State University. She worked for the federal government for 35 years, first with the Veterans Administration and then as an auditor for the Internal Revenue Service.

Mrs. Steck resided in Los Angeles for 50 years. Her many volunteer activities in the L.A. area included serving as commander of the Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary and president of the Toastmasters Club. She was a very active member of Hadassah and spent much time working in the Hadassah Thrift Shop. She loved traveling the world with her husband and she and her family endowed a scholarship at U.C. Santa Cruz, as well as donating a prize each year for the most outstanding senior thesis at the university.

She is survived by her husband, John of Carmel; son Loren of Carmel; brother, Sherwin J. Klein of Phoenix and one grandson.

Contributions are suggested to the U.C. Santa Cruz Foundation in memory of Florence Steck, U.C. Santa Cruz, Santa Cruz, CA 95064.

ALICE VON CHRISTIERSON, a graduate of Sunset School in Carmel who most recently lived in San Jacinto, died June 13. She was 73.

Ms. von Christierson was a retired secretary who resided on the Monterey Peninsula for 30 years.

She is survived by her brother, Bill of Carmel; her son, Tom Gardner of Ventura and a grandson, Stewart Gardner of Carmel Highlands.

Memorials are suggested to the Salinas Valley Memorial Hospital Memorial Foundation, 450 E. Romie Lane, Salinas, CA 93901, or the Tri County Blood Bank, 969 N. Main St., Salinas, CA 93906.

NEADINE (DEE) LOUISE OLIVETTI, 84, a 57-year resident of Pebble Beach, died June 13.

An alumna of Kansas State, Mrs. Olivetti was a senior legal office manager for 26 years as well as a court record transcriber and real estate investor. She participated in many civic activities locally and volunteered with many charitable organizations.

She was active in California's First Theater and was a member of the board of directors of the Wharf Theater. She was a published song writer and contributed articles to the entertainment sections of many newspapers and magazines.

Mrs. Olivetti is survived by two sons, Jon Keith of St. Louis and Michael David of Pebble Beach; her sister, Mildred Leiter of Grass Valley and nine grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband, Alex, in 1997.

Memorials are suggested to the Monterey Bay Aquarium or the American Cancer Society.

OPINION

Editorial

Enough foolishness

PENINSULA RESIDENTS take pride in the fact that their community has nothing in common with the nutty megalopolis to the south.

But last week, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District gave its constituents a big dose of "logic" right out of La-La Land when it released its study on water transfers.

For several years, those transfers have provided the sole source of water for business expansions, new homes on lots of record and residential remodels in the water-deprived Peninsula. The availability of water transfers — although meager — has been a blessing for the lucky few who've managed to get an allocation from somebody who no longer needed theirs.

This important public benefit is meaningless, apparently, to diehards on the water board who are determined not to rest until every single source of new water has been eliminated.

So they attacked the water transfer program with a Big Lie — that the transfers were supposed to be permitted only if they somehow reduced overall water consumption.

That could be achieved, obviously, if water customers who no longer needed their allocations turned off their taps right before they transferred their precious gallons to their neighbors. The new users would use every bit as much water as the previous users, except that under the water transfer rules, 15 percent of the water has to be given back to the district, thereby saving it.

But if those same customers stopped using their water months or years before, water use would increase despite the 15 percent giveback because the transferred water would shift from being unused to being used as soon as the recipients got their hands on it. Obviously.

The MPWMD paid a consultant $18,000 to reach this conclusion — not because it valued his expertise, but because his independence was needed to give a preordained conclusion an aura of objectivity and credibility.

Fortunately, the public is neither stupid nor gullible. They know that the amount of water saved should be measured against the amount of water that the previous customer used when he used it, not when he didn't use it.

If the water district doesn't like calculating water savings in this existentialist way, all it has to do is decide that water credits and fixture counts don't exist — that as soon as you stop using water, you lose the right to use it.

Of course, that would discourage conservation. Anyone who planned to transfer water off-site would be rewarded if he wasted as much water as possible right up until the moment he gave it away. A transfer system like that would "save" water while actually wasting it; the present system actually saves water, while the district pretends it wastes it.

Or the district could decide that water transfers are not allowed — period. That would simply penalize young families and budding entrepreneurs while giving water-intense businesses no choice but to take over buildings where water use is already heavy, thereby eliminating the 15 percent savings that are part of the water transfer program.

The water management district should spend more time taking care of its constituents' needs and less time on demagoguery and foolishness. As soon as it fixes the Peninsula's water supply, all the fretting about water transfers and water credits will be moot.

Rescind volumetrics

Dear Editor:

The volumetric method of measuring homes which the City Council recently adopted by ordinance in a 3 - 2 vote is a concept to which I am adamantly opposed. The consequences of this untried ordinance are unknown and it renders non-conforming an estimated 60 per cent (per Brian Roseth) of homeowners who in past years constructed their homes in keeping with the codes then in force. This attempt to control the size of an unknown number of homes yet to be built seems more an act of desperation by the council rather than a well reasoned plan.

I cannot believe that the council would want to penalize the majority of the people in Carmel in the faint hope that a new, untried system would solve their perceived problem. The consequences of their act could be far reaching. I do not believe that the three Council members who voted for the ordinance (McCloud, Livingston and Ely) truly understand the possible results of their action. Certainly, it does not represent the exercise of the good judgment we should expect from members of the Council.

I believe that the offending ordinance should be rescinded and that the "system" should be given wide publicity, subjecting it to public scrutiny, possibly having a town meeting in Carpenter Hall at which time the city could explain the system in detail, with illustrations and examples, and bring some of its ramifications to light. The change is Water transfers: 1 + 1 = Huh?

Editor's Note: Due to a printing error, it was impossible to read the full text of last week's front page story about the MPWMD report on water transfers. The entire article is reprinted here.

By PAUL MILLER

THE AUTHOR of a report on water transfers says his conclusion — that water transfers don't save water — was based on fundamentally flawed data and impossible assumptions given to him by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

"Seven of the 15 examples of water users who were supposed to save water were somehow supposed to save more water than all the water they had been using," said civil engineer Leonard Dueker of DCI, Inc., in Mesa, Ariz.

"Of course, that's impossible," he said.

Nevertheless, Dueker's detailed report, which cost the district $18,000, was immediately cited as proof that the water transfer program should be halted.

"Ever since I've been on the board, the water transfer program has been problematic," said director Kris Lindstrom at this week's meeting of the water board. "Let's get rid of it."

"I would prefer to suspend receipt of any more credit applications and direct staff to incorporate more safeguards to prevent increased water use," said water board chairman Dave Potter.

But another director, Ron Chesshire, sharply criticized the report, which he said had a preordained conclusion and was based on manipulated data. "Figures lie and liars figure," Chesshire said.

Dueker began his analysis with data about water transfers supplied to him by the water district, including 15 samples of commercial "donor sites" which had been allowed to transfer water credits to others, and more than 100 "receiver sites" — mostly small additions to existing homes — which had been allocated water credits.

The donor sites were supposed to save 66 acre-feet of water, the water district told Dueker. But seven of those sites were given water-saving targets far in excess of their actual water use. One site — a demolished warehouse in Sand City — was supposed to save 1.2 acre-feet per year. But the warehouse had only been using two-tenths of an acre foot. Transferring the warehouse's water resulted in a loss of saved water of one acre-foot even if no one ever used it, according to the water district's logic.

Another donor site, Robles del Rio Lodge in Carmel Valley, is on the list. Severing its Cal-Am connection was supposed to save 9 acre-feet per year, according to the water district, based on an estimate of what the lodge was using. But since it actually used an average of only 7 acre-feet per year, eliminating that use altogether resulted in a net loss of saved water of 2 acre-feet, the district told Dueker. It didn't matter whether anyone used the water later, according to the district's rules.

In other words, the water transfer program is a failure, in part, because Robles del Rio Lodge stopped using 7 acre-feet (its entire water use) when it was "supposed" to stop using 9 acre-feet.

Taken together, these strange calculations yield a conclusion that the total water saved at the donor sites is only 29 acre-feet, much lower than the 66-acre-foot target, according to Dueker's report.

But current water use at the donor sites is about 74 acre-feet less than the water they were presumed to be using and which they are entitled to use. By this standard, the water transfer program is a smashing success.

In addition, the people who received water credits have used about 1 acre-foot less than they were allowed, according to the report. But there are "too many variables" to make the conclusion reliable, according to the water transfer report.

Dueker said the entire mish-mash could be avoided if the water district used per-capita water allocations instead of counting toilets, sinks and faucets in homes or basing commercial use on square-footage. He recommended that counting people — the system used in Arizona — would result in much more accurate projections.

"A home with 20 bathrooms could use less water than one with one bathroom," he said. "It depends on how many people live there."

Water district general manager Darby Fuerst agreed that more realistic measurements are needed. "It's time to move toward policies based on actual water used, not water allocations."

Chesshire said water-fixture counts "are fine for collecting permit fees, but their usefulness ends right there."

Dueker said in his long career as a specialist in water use, he has found that most people are conscientious about saving water.

"A goal based on the number of people living in a home and the amount of square footage outside — that's the best way to get people to save water," he said.

WILLIE JONES is already planning his tenth birthday celebration for his beach buddies – even though Oct. 14 may seem some time away.

Border terrier Willie was born in Willits (hence his name), and has lived in Carmel for well over nine years. He comes down to Carmel Beach daily with Mom Aliceon and Dad Rex and loves every second he's there.

Arriving, he runs eagerly to the bluffs overlooking the beach, scans the scene below for walkers known to carry cookies, and tears down the dunes directly for them. Willie knows every beach cookie carrier by sight, and if they're not immediately forthcoming, he sits directly in front of them. If they step aside, he moves over, too, sitting and looking up winsomely. It works every time.

At home, Willie is chums with his sis, Sally, a 5-year-old calico cat whom he allows to boss him about. Sally, born in Salinas (hence the name), was a hairdresser in a former life and enjoys grooming Willie's ears and nails, which sort of embarrasses Willie, but he acquiesces with grace and looks the spiffier for it.

If you call the Jones residence, Willie answers with barks that clearly mean Leave a message. If a message is recorded, he passes it along to Mom and Dad.

Willie will eat anything, according to Mom Aliceon, but enjoys tender green shoots from the garden or beach bluffs.

At bedtime, he retires to his comfy hallway bed and Sally to her own nicely appointed apartment in the bathroom.

"Carmel Legends"

Long before the Barbie Doll and its successor, the Cabbage Patch orphan became the rage, a very special doll was born here in Carmel. It was created by MAYOTTA COMSTOCK, and it was made of rags. She called it OTSY-TOTSY, and soon Carmel visitors were buying Otsy-Totsies by the dozen. Mayotta was as productive as she was inventive, and before long Otsy-Totsies were overflowing her living room, bedroom and bath. Faced with this population explosion, her husband HUGH built her a fullsize dollhouse with arched doorway, leaded windows, a crooked chimney and exposed structural members; a fairyland cottage. Production continued apace, so HUGH built more cottages, and suddenly people wanted to buy them. The first few, in the mid-20's, sold for around $2500. Today they command perhaps 100 times that amount. You know the Tuck Box, a COMSTOCK creation; and there's a cluster of Comstocks around Torres and Sixth Street. All started by a little rag doll, OTSY TOTSY.

Commission: No Mediterranean Market Building sign

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE BUILDING that housed the Mediterranean Market for four decades cannot be called the "Mediterranean Market Building," a unanimous Carmel Planning Commission decided this week.

"Once Mediterranean Market is no longer there, what's to say we shouldn't do away with the Mediterranean Market signs?" commissioner Bart Bartron asked.

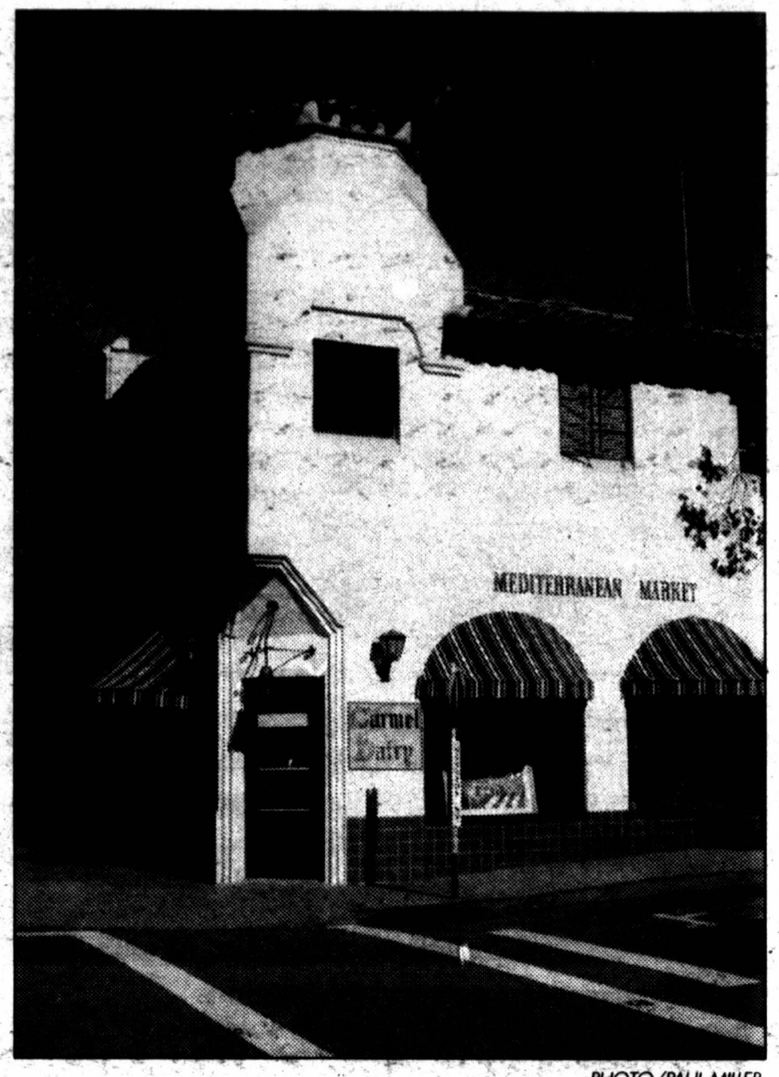
The commission's decision came after the Med Market's new tenant, Palomas Home Furnishings, asked to add the word "building" to the familiar "Mediterranean Market" signs that overlook Devendorf Park and one of Carmel busiest intersections.

"We're not talking about a sign for the business that's in that space — I don't understand why the tenant has any say over that," Bartron said.

Arnie Burttschell, owner of Palomas Home Furnishings, applied for the name change. He reportedly told a city planner that the name change was supported by the building's long time owners, the Coniglio family.

Protecting historic resource?

Assistant planner Jaci Abadilla suggested that adding "building" to the existing painted Mediterranean Market signs would "reduce the distinction of the historic Carmel Dairy site." An old sign was uncovered on the building's southeast corner during a remodel in 1996. The Coniglios restored the Carmel Dairy sign, which the city declared an historic resource.



PHOTO/PAUL MILLER

Carmel Dairy? Med Market? Regardless of what you call it, the planning commission decided that the owner cannot add the word "building" to the Mediterranean Market sign.

Abadilla said the building's tower is in the shape of a milk bottle, but her report to the commission gave no details about actual dairy operations at the site.

Neither Burttschell nor any of the Coniglio family attended the June 27 hearing. Commissioners said they could find no reason for keeping signs up for a delicatessen that no longer exists.

"I suggest we deny it," commissioner Pope Coleman said. "I simply don't understand why they want to do what they wanted to do, anyway."

The Mediterranean Market closed its doors in April and Palomas Home Furnishings opened two months later. That business has yet to come forward to apply for its own signs.

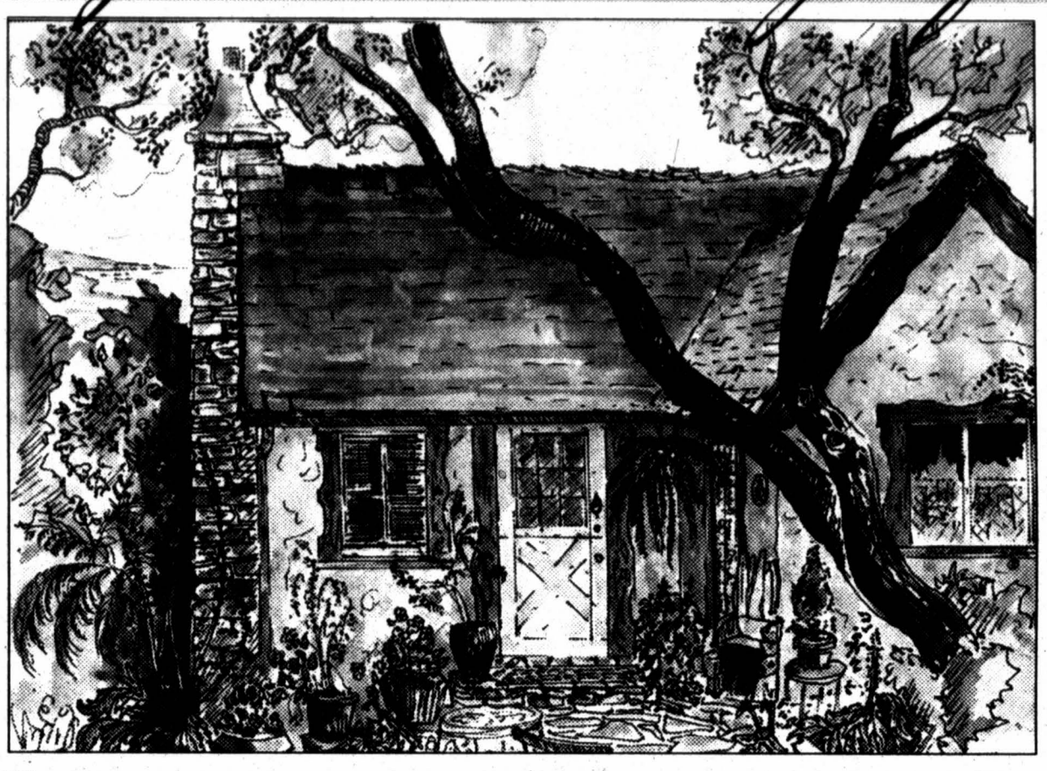
Carmel-by-the-Sea Cottage of the Month

MURPHY'S LAW



IN THE WOODS of Carmel, the whole hillside is terraced with quaint houses perched among the trees.

Some of the homes have been handsomely restored and reflect a new face. Yet, despite the march of what is sometimes misnamed "progress," it is a pleasure to know that the real beauty of many cottages has been retained along with their old-world charm.

This pen sketch reflects upon a Murphy-built cottage that was in its adolescence back in 1936. It was but 400 square feet!

Today, the cottage has grown to 1,650 square feet, yielding to the good fortune of the lot's character. A lower bedroom, office and handsome sun-deck offer a prominent view of Point Lobos.

Yet, "Murphy's Law" still prevails. Its early adolescent charm remains. Note the gate staves — carved more than 40 years ago — that still adorn the entry path with their weathered, beckoning appeal.

Enjoy a look at Murphy's Law, located 3rd NW of 5th on Santa Fe, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

TUNNEL

Some planning commissioners needed a little convincing to agree that boring a tunnel through solid rock is a good idea.

"I don't keep up with the fads of lifestyles of the rich and famous," said Commissioner Juan Sanchez. "But I'm concerned that we might start a new thing if people start boring tunnels to the beach on the peninsula. You said you looked at historic records and couldn't find another project like this, nothing covered by ordinance. What happens if the next project comes along?"

Stearn answered that the high cost of boring through solid rock likely will prevent a legion of tunnel people. "It also depends on the geology of the rock," Stearn said. "It's not going to be possible everywhere."

Commissioner Martha Diehl recused herself from voting because her great grandparents, D.L. and Lily James, built the house and her family sold it in 1999 for $4,590,000 to Searock LLC of Batavia, Illinois.

Diehl recalled that it was a springtime event for her family to repair the stairway leading down to the beach after winter storms.

The owners' geologist, Jerrie Gasch, said he found nothing to prevent drilling the tunnel stairway and recommended that the safest approach would be to bore through the most durable rock.

"There are always surprises as you go into these things," Gasch said, noting that if he found any untenable conditions which would compromise the cliff or the home's stability, he would "cease and desist" immediately.

The project will require the excavation of 193 cubic yards of material. Contractors will haul the excavated rock up with a cable and use the material to build two new retaining walls and repair existing retaining walls.

The applicants are proposing to split the rock with an air-powered rock drill and air ram. The holes will be bored, filled with water and compressed. Then the rock is manually split using a rock chisel.

If the granite proves to be too hard, the applicants propose a drilling and blasting approach.
